

Tuesday December 29th 2009

Home

This week's print edition

Daily news analysis

Opinion

- All opinion
- Leaders
- Letters to the Editor
- Blogs
- Columns
- KAL's cartoons
- Correspondent's diary
- Economist debates

World politics

- All world politics
- Politics this week
- United States
- The Americas
- Asia
- Middle East and Africa
- Europe
- Britain

Special reports

Business and finance

- All business and finance
- Business this week
- Economics focus
- Management
- Economics A-Z

Business education

- All business education
- Which MBA?

Markets and data

- All markets and data
- Daily chart
- Weekly indicators
- World markets
- Currencies
- Rankings
- Big Mac index

Science and technology

- All science and technology
- Technology Quarterly
- Technology Monitor

Books and arts

- All books and arts
- Style guide

People

- People
- Obituaries

Diversions

Audio and video

- Audio and video library
- Audio edition

The World In

- The World in 2010
- The World in 2009
- The World in 2008
- The World in 2007
- The World in 2006
- The World in 2005
- The World in 2004

Research tools

- All research tools
- Articles by subject

Books & Arts

Europe and Islam

A treacherous path?

Aug 27th 2009

 From The Economist print edition

A pessimist's view of what Islamic immigration may be doing to Europe

Panos

Reflections on the Revolution in Europe: Immigration, Islam and the West.

 By Christopher Caldwell. Doubleday; 422 pages; $30. Allen Lane; £14.99. Buy from Amazon.com, Amazon.co.uk

IN APRIL 1968 Enoch Powell, a Tory cabinet minister, destroyed his political career when he denounced mass immigration as a disaster ("like the Roman", he said, "I seem to see 'the river Tiber foaming with much blood'"). Today Powell's arguments, if not his classical allusions, are becoming dangerously mainstream.

Christopher Caldwell is an American journalist who writes for the liberal Financial Times as well as the conservative Weekly Standard. He has spent the past decade studying European immigration, travelling widely and reading voraciously in an impressive variety of languages. His controversial new book repeatedly echoes Powell's warnings all those years ago.

Mr Caldwell argues that "Western Europe became a multi-ethnic society in a fit of absence of mind." European policymakers imported people to fill short-term job shortages. But immigrants continued to multiply even as the jobs disappeared: the number of foreign residents in Germany increased from 3m in 1971 to 7.5m in 2000 though the number of foreigners in the workforce did not budge. Today immigrants account for about 10% of the population of most west European countries, and up to 30% in some of Europe's great cities.

Policymakers were even more mistaken about culture than they were about numbers. They assumed that

Comment \(1116\)
Recommend \(280\)
E-mail Share
Print
Reprints & permissions

Related Items

From The Economist

Muslim and British both EB
 May 7th 2009
 Islam in urban Europe EB
 Dec 4th 2008

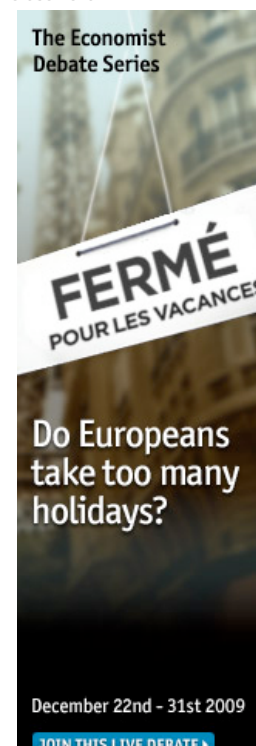

More articles about...

Religion
 Immigration and asylum

Websites

Doubleday offers an excerpt from the book. Christopher Caldwell writes for the Financial Times.

Advertisement

Economics A-Z
Special reports
Style guide

Country briefings
All country briefings
China
India
Brazil
United States
Russia

My account home

Newsletters and alerts
Manage my newsletters
Manage my e-mail alerts
Manage my RSS feeds
Manage special-offer alerts
More »

Print subscriptions
Subscribe to The Economist
Renew my subscription
Change my print subscription delivery, billing or e-mail address
Pay my bill
Activate premium online access
Report a missing copy
Suspend my subscription
More »

Digital subscriptions
Subscribe to Economist.com
Manage my subscription
Mobile edition
Audio edition
Download screensaver
More »

Classifieds and jobs

The Economist Group
About the Economist Group
Economist Intelligence Unit
Economist Conferences
Intelligent Life
CFO
Roll Call
European Voice
EuroFinance
Reprints and permissions

EIU online store

Economist shop

Advertisement

immigrants would quickly adopt the mores of their host societies. But a surprising number of immigrants have proved "unmeltable".

Mr Caldwell argues that the reason why so many immigrants failed to assimilate can be summed up in a single word: Islam. In the middle of the 20th century there were almost no Muslims in Europe. Today there are 15m-17m, making up about half of all new arrivals in Europe.

For the most part European countries have bent over backwards to accommodate the sensibilities of the newcomers. A French law court has allowed a Muslim man to annul his marriage on the ground that his wife was not a virgin on their wedding night. The British pensions department has a policy of recognising (and giving some benefits to) "additional spouses".

But European public opinion is tiring of such bending. Mr Caldwell cites a poll that shows that only 19% of Europeans think immigration to be a good thing for their country; 57% think that their country has "too many foreigners". Such numbers have recently forced politicians to adjust their policies.

Many countries are tightening their immigration laws, shifting to a skills-based immigration system and setting citizenship tests for would-be immigrants. The French have banned girls from wearing veils in schools. British politicians, such as Tony Blair and Jack Straw, have denounced the veil as a symbol of separation. The old welcome-mat seems to have been replaced by a "Love it or leave it" sign.

For Mr Caldwell this is all a matter of too little too late. Europe's indigenous population is ageing fast, with a quarter of it over 60. Immigrants have large families. Moreover, Europe is no match for Islamic self-confidence: "When an insecure, malleable, relativistic culture meets a culture that is anchored, confident and strengthened by common doctrines, it is generally the former that changes to suit the latter."

Mr Caldwell's unremitting pessimism about Europe raises all sorts of questions, both large and small. Are Europeans really as feeble as he asserts? They have discovered that some principles are non-negotiable in their relations with Islam, particularly women's rights. And is Islam really as self-confident? The willingness of so many Muslims to take offence at any slight—a cartoon here, a novel there—could be a sign of profound cultural anxiety.

Mr Caldwell is also worryingly selective in his use of evidence. He all but ignores the multiple examples of upward mobility and successful integration. He dwells on the fact that many Muslim men feel emasculated by the success of their women without bothering to wonder why so many of the women are successful.

That said, this is an important book as well as a provocative one: the best statement to date of the pessimist's position on Islamic immigration in Europe.

statement to date of the pessimist's position on Islamic immigration in Europe. Supporters of liberal policies need to sharpen their arguments if they are to prevent neo-Powellism from sweeping all before it.

Back to top ^^

Readers' comments

Readers have commented on this article (the window for new comments is now closed).

View all comments \(1116\)

Advertisement

Classified ads

Office of Fair Trading Non-Executive Directors London

Who's Who 2010 out now
Information on 33,000+ people of influence, interest and distinction in society today. New names for 2010: Roger Federer, Paulo Coelho, Matthew Brittin and Martin Lewis.

Università Bocconi: Economics and Management
Education since 1902.
- Bachelor
- Master of Sciences
- PhD
Download your Welcome Kit!

Standard Chartered PLC
Senior Manager, Thought Leadership

Explore Poland's investment opportunities

MBA-DBA-PhD FRANCE, US, JAPAN, CHINA
Boost your career with accredited Diplomas at ISM
Flexible schedules
Part-Time Study
Worldwide

Sponsor's feature

About sponsorship

THE FOLIO SOCIETY
Shorter Oxford English Dictionary with online access only $19.95
and a FREE GIFT worth $87.50
SAVE $417

JOIN THIS LIVE DEBATE ▶
The Economist

About The Economist online About The Economist Media directory Staff books Career opportunities Contact us Subscribe

Site feedback

Copyright © The Economist Newspaper Limited 2009. All rights reserved. Advertising info Legal disclaimer Accessibility Privacy policy Terms & Conditions

Help