

Sign in | Register for free

Sign in with Facebook

Site Search

Search Local Business Listings

Search for keywords, people, locations, obituaries, We

Go

Brought to you by:

- Home
- News
- Opinion
- Sports
- Entertainment
- Living
- Interact
- Jobs
- Autos
- Real Estate
- Rentals
- Classified Ads
- Shop

- Top Stories
- PolitiFact Oregon: Bringing truth to politics
- The ultimate guide to Portland-area farmers markets...
- Follow The Oregonian on Facebook

Home > Portland News

Portland schools: Advanced high school science will remain unequal from school to school

Published: Tuesday, May 10, 2011, 8:31 PM Updated: Wednesday, May 11, 2011, 10:17 AM

By Betsy Hammond, The Oregonian

Sponsored By:

Like 35 people like this.

Tweet 12

Share 35

Comment 22

Print

Michael Lloyd / The Oregonian

The Portland school board is leaning toward spending $1.3 million to buy new science textbooks and materials for all sixth-, seventh- and eighth-graders and to train teachers to use them.

But it's a different story when it comes to high school science. As The Oregonian reported in February, a lack of money is the sole reason disparities in high school science won't be addressed this fall.

The district admits there are glaring differences between the textbooks and the course content of physics, chemistry and advanced biology at different high schools. But Superintendent Carole Smith has decided that, given flat funding from the state for schools next year, the district can't afford to buy new textbooks and teacher training to fix those disparities.

After seeking extensive input from principals and others who monitor what's working best in Portland schools, Smith decided that full-day kindergarten, intensive reading instruction for students who are behind and a new educational early warning system to monitor and address student learning and behavior problems are higher priorities than new high school textbooks.

More Portland News

Most Comments Most Recent

Portland News stories with the most comments in the last 7 days.

256 Portland Mayor Sam Adams boosts funding for bike projects, but now there's less for paving streets

Curriculum director Marcia Arganbright wrote to principals today:

"There are no new high school textbook purchases in the proposed budget for 2011-12. We are not able to move forward with plans for advanced science (chemistry, physics, and Advanced Placement or International Baccalaureate sciences), health, PE, upper-level Spanish or any other world language. These adoptions are all board-approved, but unfortunately, the budget proposals for purchasing these materials did not rise to a level of priority to be included in the superintendent's proposed budget."

The fact that more equitable high school science texts are being delayed this year can be seen as ironic, given that the district spent years gearing up for high school changes taking place this fall that were sold as a way to make high school offerings more uniform and fair.

Marshall High is closing, Jefferson and Benson highs are reshaped into small niche high schools and more students are required to attend their neighborhood high school. The school board took those steps in order to make the seven remaining neighborhood high schools more alike in size so that students in all parts of town would have access to the same quality and breadth of course offerings.

Given budgetary, logistical and staffing challenges, district officials have backpedaled on their earlier pledges of seven equivalent high schools and emphasized they are making the freshman experience more equal at all neighborhood schools this year.

Advanced science classes --- along with career classes, college-credit classes, world languages and catch-up support classes -- will be made more uniform from high school to high school as next year's freshmen advance through high school, they now say.

- Betsy Hammond

Related topics: carole smith, marcia arganbright, portland schools budget, pps, science books, textbooks

139 Kyrn Horman: Portland TV stations revisit case, talk with Kaine Horman

136 Portland Public Schools bond fails; 51 percent of voters say 'no'

135 Clackamas County vote jeopardizes Sellwood Bridge replacement (election results)

125 Portland Public Schools bond losing in early results (election results)

Sprint advertisement for Samsung Epic 4G. Text: Get an instant rebate on every device from Sprint. Get it now. America's Favorite 4G Network.

Sponsored Links

Exclusive Hyatt® Deals

Get Hyatt's Best Hotel Discounts. Visit the Official Site & Book Now! Hyatt.com

Invest In Gold: Free Kit

Learn How to Invest In Gold. Get Started with Free Investors Kit Now! Goldline.com/Gold

Unsecured Personal Loans

Apply Now. Bad Credit OK. 100% Online. It's Easy. www.eLoanPersonal.com

Share this story with social media icons (Facebook, Twitter, etc.)

Story tools: Email, Print

More stories in Portland News

Previous story

Portland store clerk shot after she opened the till for two robbers

Next story

Downtown Portland news digest for Wednesday, May 11: forever-stamp edition

22 Comments Feed

Post a comment

View: Oldest first | Newest first

1 | 2

Next comments >>

cb May 10, 2011 at 11:42AM Follow

** Given budgetary, logistical and staffing challenges, district officials have backpedaled on their earlier pledges of seven equivalent high schools and emphasized they are making

Most Active Users What's this?

Users with the most OregonLive.com comments in the last 7 days

96 Mayonasia

94 vwolf

72 EagleforFree...

71 Phil123Jones

69 Seriously?

Users We Love

OregonLive.com contributor 'lynn97030'

Frequent commenter also posts articles to My Oregon public blog.

More Users We Love

Connect with OregonLive.com What's this?

